• The ability to recognize ways in which the use of computers affects ethical, political, and social issues.

• Knowledge about some specific issues affected by computers (see lecture topic list on 2006 expanded course description).

• The ability to research and discuss in some depth a particular issue.